condemn selfishness just as strongly as do the peoples of the west.

Manly valor is a prized quality throughout the world. If the civilizations of the east and the west are essentially different, how do you explain the strong appeal that western literature makes on the Oriental mind? Witness the sweeping popularity a great many western writers command among the Japanese and Chinese. Lincoln is just as much revered on this side of the Pacific as on the other, because he possessed the quality which appeals strongly both to the western and Oriental heart. I fail-to understand the real meaning of Mr. Wilbur's "marching hosts of two civilizations," even as a figure of speech. Whatever the outward forms of the different civilizations be, there is no reason why they cannot be harmonized by cannot be harmonized by cannot be harmonized by cannot of all is the same. All human efforts must converge to this goal.

In the present stage of human society we cannot altogether dispense with armaments, but they should not be greater than is justified by the necessity of guarding world civilization. Armaments are the means for the defense and protection of civilization. Armaments are the means for the defense and protection of civilization, for the maintenance of order and the protection of humanity. The Chinese ideograph expressing the military arts is made by combining an ideograph expressing a halberd. How to parry the stroke of a sword is the spirit of the military arts, according to the ancient Chinese classics. This spirit came down to us, and we now hear the statesmen of all nations talk of armaments as weapons of defense against disturbing factors. In this sense we heartily approve the suggestion for the reduction of armaments. They should be kept on a minimum scale dictated by necessity, protecting civilization, keeping order and helping civilization advance. As it advances further, so proportionately may armaments be reduced until at length, ideally at least, they may be dispensed with altogether.

Mr. MacDonald's explanation is straightforward. It has been given freely to those who have asked for it. It is firstly, that the transfer to himself of the shares in question had nothing to do with politics. Secondly, what is already known, namely, that Sir Alexander Grant received his baronetcy for public services, including the gift of a national library to Scotland, for which he has been ac-corded by his fellow-citizens of Edinburgh the freedom of that important

Both are Moray-shire men, born in small circum-stances—one in Forres and the other in Lossiemouth. Sir Alexander Grant's father and Mr. MacDonald's uncle were fellow guards on a High-land railway. When Mr. MacDonald became Prime Minister, Sir Alexander asked to be allowed to give him an automobile. Mr. MacDonald demurred, saying that when he left office he would probably be unable to maintain it. Sir Alexander Grant thereupon offered to endow his gift,

The theme as developed by campaign speakers involves a discussion of the ability of rival parties to grant desired reforms. The American people want progress. The Re-publican Party stands for inaction. The Progressives espouse drastic changes. Orderly progress, therefore, is centingent upon Democratic success.

Lanchester Balancer Adopted by Willys-Knight is Acclaimed

Automotive engineers and mechanical experts are impressed by Willys-Knight's new refinement, the Lanchester Balancer, in eliminating vibration. Read these comments.

Glenn Curtiss

"It is surprising. I drove the car (Willys-Knight Sedan) at all speeds up to 50 miles an hour and found absolutely no vibration."

Works Manager, Remington Cash Register

"The smoothness of the motor was a revelation. The driver increased the speed from 15 miles an hour to approximately 45 miles and, as far as I could detect, with no vibration. It would seem that the balancer is doing the trick and gives sixcylinder operation as far as smoothness is concerned.'

Hiram P. Maxim

President, Maxim Silencer Company

"The Lanchester Balancer certainly takes out the vibration. It makes the motor smoother than most of the six and eightcylinders on the road today."

Maurice Olley Rolls-Royce, Production Manager

"From the demonstration there is no doubt that the elimination of the inherent harmonic vibration, by means of the rotating balancer, has been attained in practice to a degree which is very satisfactory to the passenger."

Willys-Knight scores again. To its famous sleeve-valve engine, that improves with use, it adds a perfection long sought by many motor cars—the elimination of vibration.

President Coolidge, in response to ppeals from the Fishermen's Union, appeals from the Fishermen's Union, for support of the plan, writes that he has been much interested in the movement to organize industry on a co-operative marketing basis and that he feels that such a move in the fish industry will promote its best interests. Mr. Hoover an Advocate

The plan, apparently started by Henry Wise, a Boston lawyer and attorney for the Fishermen's Union, has been favored by Aaron Sapiro, organizer of similar plans in other RIGHT OF GARAGE CO. lines, and by Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce. The project would arrange for a co-operative association to buy the fish of the various vessels at a flat rate, thus stabilize prices and prevent sharp fluctuations in value.

Vessel captains would be under contract to sell to the co-operative contract to sell to the co-operative association only, and at the rate specified as fair market value. The association would handle it through storage houses, built or bought for the purpose, and distribute it as widely as possible, with advertising and other programs adopted to build up a constant market.

The Chamber of Commerce committed any result of the garage from bullding, filled on the grounds that the garage would violate the provisions of the zoning such that the sanction to build was granted before the law went into effect, even though the actual building permit was issued after this effectiveness.

There has been opposition to the garage from the time it was first proup a constant market.

Connecticut State Forester Issues a Warning to People

Million and Half Acres of Land Going to Waste While Industries Import Raw Material

cial)—Pointing out to the people of Connecticut that the industries of the State are becoming more and more dependent upon raw material from distant points and urging them to awaken to the need of forestry development. Austin F. Hawes, state forester, in a statement to a representative of The Christian Science Monitor, said that Connecticut has 1500 000 ecres of land sufficient has 1500 000 ec cut has 1,500,000 acres of land suitable for timber growing on the same intensive and profitable scale as it is grown in France, Switzerland and Belgium. He said:

Airplane photographs of sections of this state show extensive areas without habitations. If one will take the trouble to explore the back roads he will be astonished to find the long he will be astonished to find the long stretches without a sign of a house or cultivated field. In some parts of the state as around Glastonbury prosperous communities of Italian farmers have sprung up who are raising fruits. There are other com-munities of recently arrived Euro-peans and, of course, the better farm regions are still inhabited by the old New England stock, but the number regions are still inhabited by the old New England stock, but the number of domestic animals is steadily de-creasing and consequently more land is annually growing up to brush. What is being done with this land? Practically nothing.

Great Industrial State Connecticut is a great industrial state. Its large cities, New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport, Waterbury and New Britain, and such smaller cities as Danbury, Meriden, Manchester, Torrington, New London and Norwich are all teeming with flourishing manufacturing industries flourishing manufacturing industries which have been gradually developed from the small beginnings of forme days. Yet there is not one of these industries which has any inherent eason for making Connecticut its ome today. The great brass industry of the Naugatuck valley is an outgrowth of the early tin peddling business and relies upon copper im-ported from distant states.

The silk industry was started in Manchester when silk worms were being raised on local mulberry trees. Today all of the raw silk is imported from abroad. In the same way the numerous industries using cotton, silver, and iron all secure their raw materials from other states and all of the coal used in the process of manufacture is imported. If the American continent were divided into small competing nations as is Europe, and each of these was selfish in the use of its raw materials. Connecticut would be an abandoned country without industry and with few people.

Time was when every hillside

Time was when every hillside hamlet had its own wood-using in-dustry and turned out furniture, or wagons or carriages equal to any in the country. Today the old Windsor chairs are among the most highly prized finds of the antique collector. The little village of Riverton, once called Hitchcockville, turned out be-fore the Civil War a chair which is fore the Civil War a chair which is sought everywhere by collectors. Today Connecticut imports its furniture from the factories of Grand Rapids or Gardner and these factories import their raw materials from forests hundreds of miles distant. What does a state which prides itself on its great manufacturing centers do to keep up the native industries of its hillside communities? Practically nothing.

Imported From Distance Here is a small compact State ith a dense populattion crowded with a dense population crowded into a few centers in need annually of a great quantity of lumber and wood products, which are now imported from distant forests. But within the limits of this little State so like some of the European countries, there are 1,500,000 acres of land suitable for timber growing on the same intensive and profitable scale as it is grown in France and Switzerland and Belgium. The climate and soil are favorable. Valuable tree species are native. The transportation problem is simple, because of the numerous railroads and splendid highways.

Something more is needed than protection of the forests, important protection of the forests, as are those measures. We need change of attitude. We must ceas thinking of cordwood as the final crop of a forest and must retain ood trees for timber produc Enough cordwood can be pr tion. Enough cordwood can be produced through thinnings to take care of our requirements. The customary way is always the easiest. How are people to be persuaded to leave their best trees for fifty or more years if they can sell them for cordwood at twenty-five years?

The best way to insure the leaving of trees for advanced growth is through a kind of ownership that can afford to wait. A corporation like a water company can do this. So can the Government, whether national, state or municipality. The forest tracts in Connecticut are not sufficiently large to appeal to the Federal Government. There are, however, many sections where areas however, many sections where areas varying from one to twenty thou-sand acres could be acquired.

Scarcely 10,000 Acres Acquired The program of the Connecticut orestry Association contemplates Forestry Association contemplates the acquisition by the state of 200, 000 acres or about one-seventh of the total forest area of the State. At present scarcely 10,000 acres have been acquired. The people have not yet awakened to the need of this program. Appropriations have been inadequate. An attempt will be made in the next General Assembly to secure a bond issue to finance such a program of acquisition.

The materials that the farmer uses have increased steadily in cost since 1918, without a corresponding increase in the price that he receives for what he produces. This trend has been steady, but this summer has seen conditions develop that have deprived him of what market he haleft for a number of his crops. Carrots, beets, lettuce and spinach have come in from Texas, California and the eastern part of Virginia at a time when the Massachusetts truck-grower had reason to expect to get the early season prices for uses have increased steadily in cos

Acres of lettuce met with a similar fate because only 10 cents a bushel box was bidden for it in Boston, although California lettuce was selling briskly at 10 cents the head and ordinary lettuce raised outside Massachusetts was bringing 5 cents the head. This is bound to be a deterrent to future planting unless the market rouses itself to some interest in the future of the Massachusetts farmer.

The yards make connections with the West Shore Railroad at Ravena, the new line under its official name of the "Hudson River Connecting Railroad," being 28 miles in length.

The new yard will be kept busy. The present Albany yards dispatch 400 cars on an average every day, divided fairly evenly between the Boston & Albany and the New York Roentral's two divisions between New York and Albany. Benito Mussolini's Attacks on Masonry Menace Freedom

THE ROOSEVELT

A' Great New York Hotel Opening September 22nd

Where the Essentials of Good Living are not forgotten amidst the splendor of Appointments

The Roosevelt occupies an entire block in the heart of New York. Its majestic facades dominate Madison and Vanderbilt Avenues at Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth Streets-the choicest and most convenient location in the city. A private passageway gives covered access to Grand Central Terminal.

Mr. Edward Clinton Fogg-formerly Managing Director of the Plaza, New York, and the Copley-Plaza of Boston, will give his exclusive time and attention to The Roosevelt as Managing Director.

The Roosevelt has 1100 guest rooms. Special suites on upper floors open into private gardens, far above street level.

The Roosevelt is the last word in fire-proof construction, artistic environment and luxury of equipment. But it is more. It is a public trust, no less than a private enterprise, based on these fundamental ideas:

That brick and stone and fine frescoes do not make a home, nor yet a hotel. They are but the setting for a hospitality which should be a pleasant memory.

That coffered ceilings and Jacobean panels are, after all, poor substitutes for cheerful, attentive, yet unobtrusive service. That the traveling public has become sophisticated and demands realities.

That, to be worthy of its name, The Roosevelt shall be first and last an agreeable "other home" for every man, woman or child who enters its portals.

In order to estimate the output of British-made motor vehicles, it is necessary to take the figures issued by the Ministry of Transport and the ones released by the board of trade, and analyze them from a purely English standpoint. The Ministry of Transport statistics, issued at stated intervals, show the approximate number of motor vehicles in use in England at certain dates; but they do not distinguish between British and foreignmade cars. This omission may be supplied by the board of trade returns of imports and exports. By treating the year's exports as a plus quantity, in relation to the number of motor vehicles actually licensed for use in Great Britain, and adding a small allowance of 2 per cent for wastage made good, an approximate idea is obtained of the output of the British motor car industry. Thus, the increase of cars in 1924 up to June 1 was 52,147; the 2 per cent wastage figures were 9330, being 2 per cent of the previous year's total, 425,590; adding the exports for the year ended May he previous year's total, 425,690 ing the exports for the year ended May 31 to this gives 69,806; the net imports for the same period amounted to 20,588, which deducted gives the approximate yearly output from May 31, 1923, to May 31, 1924, of 49,218. Crisis Past

The crisis that appeared to demand a dictatorship is past, yet Signor Vilple, only awaiting such an opportunity, was gradually harnessed to his vast military machine.

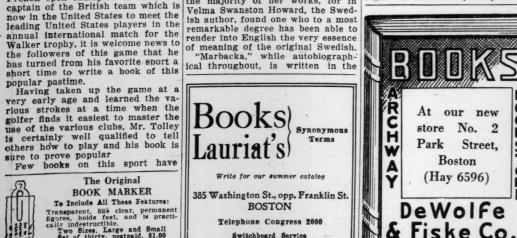

Benito Mussolini found the people of Italy torn by internal strife, by pusillanimity, by class hatred, and he understood how to forge their patriotism into a weapon which should restore order, prosperity and confidence. The present volume considers the methods which he adopted.

OR more than three centuries the supreme inspiration of the English-speaking world has been the genius of Shakespeare. No one before or since has ever found in language such beauty and power.

"He gave us the deeper meanings of our words; taught us the art of speech," Ingersoll said in his famous lecture on Shakespeare. "He was the lord of language, master of expression and compression. He put the greatest thoughts into the shortest words; made the poor rich and the common royal."

Practically every famous writer since has lighted his torch from the eternal flame of the great master's work. And for every man and woman who would cquire greater facility, greater force and greater finish in speech and writing, there is nothing to com-pare with the reading of Shakespeare.

Now ONE volume brings you ALL of Shakespeare!

Are you enjoying the matchless pleasures and benefits that Shakespeare holds for you? Here is a unique opportunity to renew your acquaintance with his immortal writings. We have had, during the past three weeks, festival productions of all the most important works of Wagner and Mozart, excepting "The Magic Flute" but including the delicious "Cosi fan Tutte." And what would make a more appetizing interlude between two nights of the somber Wagnerian tetralogy than this airy nonsense about two silly girls who allow themselves to be fooled by their own lovers in disguise?

But it was not the ladies nor their support of the words which had inspect, and singing. To most important works of Wagner and with the swift flicker of her recitatives and the easy purity of her sweet voice. The performance was not going well, when she tripped on the stage with the ladies' morning chocolate, but her presence stimulated her fellow singers and the orchestra to life, even as, later in the play, disguised as a doctor, she aroused the lovers.

stumblingblock. Berlioz wittily called the singers of his time who did this, "performers on the larynx." To separate the phonetics of the singing voice from those of speech is to take a short cut to vocal decadence and, as Ffrangcon-Davies pointed out, the very mastery of the voice, divorced from pure speech, becomes a snare. It ends in mere "vocalization of the origin of this strange language is interesting. He tracks it down to the rigid adoption of the old Italian school of singing in Victorian days.

Besides Pedrillo, Herr Seydel sang a number of other parts in which he showed himself a first-rate artist. His David in "Die Meistersinger" was an exuberant display of boy-hood which made it almost impossi-ble to believe that the deformed and crabbed Mime with his mean stu- for the voice, treated it not so much pidity was the same person. His acting in the last scene, when he attended on the suffering Amfortas, was a perfect interpretation of the pity which is the keynote of the drama, and at the speaking voice. Schönberg directed that the voice part of "Pierrot Lunaire" should be given as a "spoken melody" ("Sprechmelodie") same time a piece of complete self-effacement in support of a more important character.

Tenors and Baritones

The more heroic tenors were hardly as satisfactory. Neither Herr Nicolai Reinfeld's Siegfried, nor Herr Karl Erb's Parsifal was more than competent. Herr Otto Wolf sang well as Walther, and in "Tristan." Indeed, for once, we heard the love-duet in the last-named opera sung perfectly in tune. But as an actor Herr Wolf fell somewhat short of

Some years ago Mr. Plunket Greene, in his "Interpretation in Song," gave us a typical example of singer's English, consisting of a few lines of a popular song—Barnby's "When the flowing tide comes in"—as sung by a contralto and applauded by the public. He remarked, "It is terrible to look at and more terrible to hear, but it is not a caricature."

By May? This misconception explains the desperate attempt to impart the tword "hour" by pronouncing it "ow-ur," and other similar ingenuities. The effort, conscious or unconscious, to transform the voice into a mechanical instrument, as it were, by aiming, not at a word, but at a tone or a sound, is another stumblingblock. Berlioz wittily called the singers of his time who did this "nerformers on the leaves."

Electrifies Theater
Yet it all reduces itself to the fact of this artist's individuality. Like Fräulein Ivogün's, his very presence on the stage electrifies the whole theater. As a singer he achieves wonders with a volce which one fancies has not been easy to master. In "Seraglio" his low staccate notes in the ensmebles made one dub him the human contrafagotto And what instrument in the orchestra is itself more human than the bassoon? His scene with Pedrillo was the most comical piece of work in this kind I have ever seen. Waking Up Criticism

Philippe Jarnach, a Spaniard by parentage but German by adoption, contributed one of the most interesting numbers with his String Quartet, Op. 16. It is unusual in its structure: there are two sections, but the traditional sonata form is not observed; there is no first movement proper, for instance, but the entire work consists of several smaller portions, of which each forwards and develops its own theme. The adagio of the second section is particularly beautiful.

In form, Francesco Malipiero's "Stornelli e Ballate" for string quartet are similar to the Jarnach piece. They comprise 14 short movements derived from Italian themes of the seventeenth century, which are treated in a rather conventional and dainty manner.

Malipiero's compatriot, Mario Castelmovo-Tedesco, also builds on national themes — Spanish dance rhythms—in his song cycle "Coplas," a variety of short and delicate moodpictures, of which each is a little human drama by itself. In subject and conciseness of form these songs

For the first time in history military leaders of a nation, at posts stern competition, for three former thousands of miles apart, were able to sit in on a conversation with their commanding general with as much ease as though all were at a dinner table, and even more remarkable was the fact fhat citizens estimated at 25,000,000 were able to listen in as clearly as though they, too, were at the same table.

Gentlemen of Philadelphia Bow to the Englishmen by a 3-to-0 Score

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 13 Special)—Before a crowd of about 000, the Corinthian soccer team of England kept its record clean or United States soil by winning an inter esting match from the Gentlemen of Philadelphia at the Merion Cricket Club grounds, yesterday afternoon, 3 goals to 0.

It was due to the remarkable individual playing of Hunter, inside right of the invading team, that the Gentle-men of Philadelphia met with a defeat. Three times Hunter took the ball down the field and evading his opponents, managed to tally goals.

Nayada In Masterful Race

Nayada, which started late in the first race, but finished in time to pick up one point for third place, sailed a masterful race yesterday to win three more points. She covered the 16½-mile leeward-windward course in 2h. 11m. and 45s. Ariel was given second place as a result of the disqualification of Mebleh, her elapsed time being 2h. 15m. 10s.

With a southwesterly off-shore breeze growing stronger by the hour, Mebleh and Ariel took two reefs in their mainsail before starting. Nayada, however, forced to take chances to atone for its poor showing of the first day, spread a full sail. This raised a question of judgment against the Canadian skipper. N. R. Gooderham, as it was figured while the full mainsail might give him a small advantage over the leeward course, in beating against the wind on the return trip he would be overburdened with sail. His judgment, however, was splendidly vindicated by the results.

Ariel was first over the starting mark at 11:15 a, m., but Nayada was close behind and nearer the mark. Coming about to point on the course, Nayada's inside position gave her the lead at once. Mebleh came along 200 yards astern, salling her own race. All three contenders immediately broke out spinnakers.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Sept. 13-With than the score indicates, as there were many rallies and each point was sharply contested. Miss Jacobs, howonly one more victory necessary to American cup for a year and thus keep it from becoming the permanent property of Great Britain, the American and British six-meter yachts met on Long Island Sound today in the sixth of their series of races. Four victories are to decide possession of the cup and the United States, as the result of its victory in vesterday's race by a score. victory in yesterday's race by a score of 20 points to 16¼, needs only one more win, while Great Britain must win two straight in order to gain the Yesterday's score was the most decisive yet noted in the series. Once more a British yacht had the honor of crossing the finish line first; but her teammates did not give her sufficient aid to take the race. Zenith was yesterday's winner and it was the second time this yacht had finished first. Betty has also had the honor of finishing first in two of, the races while Echo finished first in the other.

CONSTRUCTIVE NEWS IGNORED BY THE MARKET

Professionals Do Not Think Bankers Favor Higher Prices

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (Special)-The stock market does not always follow closely the news of the day. It did ot this week. Sometimes it moves 178 translation. 125 translation and 182 translation. 125 translation. 125 translation. A 12214 The announcements were not all capable of favorable interpretation. A majority of them were. The week started with special discussion of the election in the State of Maine as the development that was likely to exert more influence upon the prices for securities than any other single pending event.

securities than any other single pending event.

The returns were considerably more favorable from the Republican point of view than had been expected. The stock market responded to the extent of several points, but this upturn proved to be of short duration. Stocks went down about as rapidly as they had gone up.

Naturally professional operators, who were credited with being the prin-

Naturally professional operators, who were credited with being the principal speculative factors in the market, jumped to the conclusion that powerful banking members were not in favor of higher prices. Accordingly they turned to the short side. The short interest in a considerable number of industrial stocks was said to have increased materially.

Constructive News Ignored

Then came the announcement that the unfilled orders of United States Steel Corporation on Aug. 30 were 102,500 tons larger than they were on the corresponding date in July. Officials of the United States Steel Corporation let it be known also at about the same time that probably the Carnegie Steel Company would find it necessary to increase its blast furnace capacity substantially before the close of the current month. Stocks went up again, but they did not stay up.

Naturally the professional operators came to the same conclusion that they did when the rise following the Maine election was not long sustained.

The next important item of constructive news was the announcement that the car loadings on the raliroads of the United States for the last week of August aggregated more than 1,000,000 cars. This was the first time in 1924 that they had reached that high level. During the autumn of last year the loadings were in excess of 1,000,000 cars for many weeks in succession. For a week of August, 1923, the total was nearly 72,000 cars more than for the corresponding week this year. Constructive News Ignored more than for the corresponding week this year.

During the coming weeks rallway executives expect that million car totals will be common again. While the grain movement will make perhaps the largest single contribution to this heavy traffic movement, it is expected that there will be a good sized increase in practically all the important commodities and in others that are not regarded as specially important.

Maney Rates Easy

Call money at 3 per cent or higher during the autumn would not have caused surprise in most circles and would have been regarded as perfectly logical. Instead there was a drop this week to 2 per cent. In fact, that could be called the prevailing quotation. Not only this, but time money was quoted about ¼ of 1 per cent lower for nearly all maturities.

In view of the larger movement in traffic and the heavy disbursements next Monday and the preparations that are being made by the leading bankers for the flotation of $100,000,000.000 German bonds in this country in October, the easier money rates this week were surprising. While there may be a moderate turn upward before long no one is predicting tightness in the money market.

The Government crop report indicated a decrease of $3,000,000 bushels in this year's corn crop, and an in-

The Government crop report indicated a decrease of 63,000,000 bushels in this year's corn crop, and an increase of 23,000,000 bushels in the prospective wheat crop. The latter is placed at 837,000,000 bushels, and the former at 2,513,000,000 bushels.

While the condition of corn is not altogether satisfactory in some sections of the country, competent judges believe that if the frosts hold off the final yield will be reasonably satisfactory. With the wheat and corn crops as good as indicated, and with prices at the present high levels, the effect upon general business should be highly important.

As against the foregoing announcements there were items of news that were discouraging to the holders of securities of the corporations making them. Special mention might be made of the cutting in half of the Chandler Motor and Indiana Pipe Line dividends, and the passing of the Union Bag & Paper quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share. If the exact facts could be learned quite likely it would be found that these dividend actions were due more to conditions affecting those particular corporations than to the business situation in this country as a whole.

Extra Dividends

If one were to count up the diviments there were items of news that were discouraging to the holders of securities of the corporations making them. Special mention might be made of the cutting in half of the Chandler Motor and Indiana Pipe Line dividends, and the passing of the Union Bag & Paper quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share. If the exact facts could be learned quite likely it would be found that these dividend actions were due more to conditions affecting those particular corporations than to the business situation in this country as a whole.

Extra Dividends

If one were to count up the dividends that have been reduced or passed within the last few weeks, one would find that the total is extremely small in comparison with the regular disbursements. In addition to the latter have been the ordering of extra dividends by several well-known companies. Mention might be made of the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company, the Island Creek Coal Company and the Air Reduction Company, all of which declared extra dividends of $1 a share.

It must have been difficult, even for pany and the Air Reduction Company, all of which declared extra dividends of $1 a share.

It must have been difficult, even for extreme pessimists, not to have regarded the European situation as having improved greatly in recent weeks. Prior to that time there had been improvement that was not specially perceptible.

The signing of the London Agreement, the beginning of reparations payments and the renewal of the $100,000,000 credit by J. P. Morgan & Co. to the French Government for stabilizing the franc are among the most recent developments that have played an important part in bringing about better times for Europe.

Prominent Americans who are returning every day from business and vacation trips say that conditions are decidedly better and are certain to become more so as the Dawes plan goes more generally into effect.

The presidential campaign in the United States does not appear to be giving any political group special concern. Judging from the statements in the newspapers from day to day all three of the leading parties are certain to win by big pluralities.

PROFITS OF GIMBEL STORES RUNNING AT

NEW YORK, Sept. 13—The opening of the new Saks Fifth Avenue stores will add an important unit to the Gimbel chain of department stores.

It is hoped this new unit will do an annual business of between $17,000,000 and $19,000,000. When this is attained the Gimbel system will have a total volume of about $120,000,000 annually. Earnings in 1924 are running at an annual rate of around $11 or $12 a share, the best showing in its history. Last year profits, including the old Saks store on Sixth avenue, totaled $7,378,646, equal to $10.37 a share on the common.

Rail Executive Says Burdensome Levies Retard Growth of the Carriers

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Sept. 13-Speaking before the Bankers' Association of New Mexico at a meeting here today, Charles Dillon of Chicago assistant to the chairman of the Western Railways' Committee on Public Relations, said that the six principal railroads in New Mexico, with less than 3000 miles of line within its borders, are paying 30 per cent of the tayes, state, county and town. In some counties they pay as high as 65 per cent of all the taxes.

According to figures given by Mr. Dillon, the railroads paid about $1.089,000 in taxes in New Mexico in 1915, and about $2,497,990 in 1923, an increase in eight years of about 135 per cent! ern Railways' Committee on Public

WEEK'S REVIEW RECORD HIGH RATE OF EVENTS IN BRITISH FINANCE

London Looks for Dearer Money - Colonies Post-

LONDON, Sept. 13—An atmosphere of expectancy pervades the city, and the possibility of autumn elections is somewhat embarrassing to new business.

No considerable stringency has declared itself in the money market, but credits are not overplentiful and the rise in the French money rate this week, regarded as the beginning of dearer money, coincides with the heavy capital requirements for Germany.

Stock market prices are well main-

of the American crop.

Interest has also reawakened in the rubber shares, and there has been considerable excitement in the tea share market, where this week's settlement has been the largest recorded.

The general stock market price level, as shown by the returns of 100 typical concerns representing all classes of investment, is 32 per cent above that of last July after adjustment for bonus distributions and new issues.

The autumn loan season has commenced but new issues are mostly domestic, as overseas borrowers generally are holding off to see how the German loan will go.

The principal exception is that of the Buenos Aires Western Railway which is making a £1,000,000 issue of 10-year 5 per cent notes at 95.

CONSTRUCTION IN AUGUST UPGRADE

New York

Contracts Awarded Show Increase Over July and August Last Year

Construction activities showed a slight increase last month, according to the F. W. Dodge Corporation's statement for August. Contracts awarded last month in the 36 eastern states (which include about seven eighths of the total construction vol ume of the country) amounted t $354,442,700. The increase over July was nearly 3 per cent; over August o last year, nearly 19 per cent. The more important items in the August record were: $148,231,800, or 42 per cent, for residential buildings; $65,296,400, or 18 per cent, for public works and utilities; $41,151,300, or 12 works and utilities; $41,151,300, or 12, per cent, for commercial buildings; $31,771,100, or 9 per cent, for educational buildings; and $30,379,700, or 8 per cent, for industrial buildings.

Total construction started in the 36 eastern states during the first eight months of this year has amounted to $3,020,761,400, an increase of 11 per cent over the corresponding period of last year. This increase has been largely in the states in the east and southeast, the territory north of Tennessee and west of the Allegheny Mountains having been rather less active in building than it was last year.

over contracts awarded was 53 per cent. This is the lowest percentage of excess since the war, 50 per cent being FALL RIVER. Mass., Sept. 13 the normal excess. This is one indication that the amount of deferred construction which may be expected to go ahead is not large at the present time.

In certain districts (middle Atlantic states, southeastern states, and the central west), all of which are comparatively active at present, there seems to be an appreciable volume of deferred construction, which will tend to maintain a relatively high rate of activity in these districts. In the remaining territory, the supply of new buildings seems to have fairly well caught up with the existing demand.

HEAVY TURNOVER OF FUNDS

NEW YORK, Sept. 13—An unusually heavy turnover of funds in the New York Federal Reserve district is expected next Monday as a result of the announcement of U. S. Treasury's operations up to September 15. The local bank expected to handle the bulk of principal and interest payments on Liberty bonds and Treasury certificates which may total $500,000,000. Receipts for the new Treasury notes will approximate $400,000,000, and about $250,000,000 will represent quarterly tax payments. The Government will withdraw from banks in this district $9,482,150 on that date.

Commercial failures in the United States this week increased to 319 com-pared with 251 in the preceding week and 296 in the corresponding week last year, R. G. Dun & Co. reports.

GASOLINE DEMAND PASSES PEAK AND PRICES WEAKER

Tillsa, Okla., Sept. 13 (Special)—With the peak of the summer gasoline demand apparently past, the refinery of motor fuel has assumed a tendency to weakness.

The new navy grade was obtainable recently at the refineries at 7½ to 7¾ cents a gallon, compared with 8 to 8¼ a week previous. Other grades, however, are reported to be holding firm, along with other classes of refined products. The demand for kerosene, fuel oil and gas oil is active.

The crude oil situation, except for Tonkawa deep sand development, is regarded by the operators as satisfactory, the output of the Cromwell and Stroud areas continuing to decline with considerable rapidity.

and Stroud areas continuing to decline with considerable rapidity.

The flood on Tonkawa crude had its first definite effect on the crude oil price situation on Wednesday, Sept. 10, when the Kay County Gas Company (Marland) abolished its price of $1.65 a barrel for oil of 42 gravity and above, and made its top price $1.50 a barrel for oil of 39 gravity and above. The company also announced that.

The company's prices now are 30 to 32.9 gravity, $1.20; 33 to 35.9, $1.30; 36 to 38.4, $1.40, and 39 and above, $1.50.

The Prairie Oil & Gas Company, which is the dominant-purchaser in Oklahoma, has the following prices: below 30, $1.10; 30 to 32.9, $1.25; and 33 and above, $1.50. The Prairie runs all of the oil, but pays for only one all of the oil, but pays for only one half of it regardless of grade. Los Angeles metropolitan area showed $17,730,677 in permits taken out during the month. This district, which includes 14 municipalities, gained 13 per cent over the previous month.

MARKET OPINIONS

Schirmer, Atherton & Co., Boston: Just what are the prospects? Briefly we think as suggested last week that either politics or foreign financing will provide the basis for window dressing. Improved railroad earnings over the seasonal aver-age as the crops begin to move will furage as the crops begin to move will further strengthen the background for a resumption of the advance. Accordingly we think good rails such as Reading, Atchison and the Missouri, Kansas & Texas issues are a purchase now. We advocate, however, that as signs of recovery begin to appear, clients restrain the natural buillish impulses which rising prices stimulate and be on the lookout for storm signals. We doubt a higher level in the general averages than has yet been seen, at least until it becomes more clear whether we are in a major buil movement or an exaggerated distributive period.

Tucker, Bartholomew & Co., Boston: The reaction has gone further than it gave evidence of doing when it started. At this writing a secondary downward movement is obviously in progress. Perhaps it has considerably further to go and perhaps it is very nearly completed. But it is a secondary movement rather than a major one. The bull market is being interrupted. It has not been completed.

Hornblower & Weeks, Boston: We see no change in the market situation from our outline of the past two days concerning the tendency of fluctuations to denote accumulation in various sections of the list. Do not expect to buy all your stocks on a given day, as many issues have already established their lows and as accumulation proceeds further, special issues will be found to have advanced ahead of other stocks.

decision of Frairie is taken as an indication of the satisfaction with the prospects for production in northwest Colorado following tests of the Texas-Transcontinental discovery well on Moffat Dome.

GENERAL TRADE IS MOVING FORWARD

NEW YORK, Sept. 13-Bradstreet's

review of trade says:

Despite some evidences that early fall buying has in some instances been satisfied, and that purchases for the more distant positions are quite closely restricted, the general trend is toward a continuance of the moderate improvement heretofore noted. Better than this moderate trend is apparently not expected just at present, the tendency being to go forward cautiously. It has been too cool for most crops. but especially for corn, which needs continued warm—weather, while it has been too dry for cotton is most states. Cool weather, however, has had a stimulating effect on both retail and jobbing trade, more especially in states, 100%, review of trade says:

tion to earn net of around $3,000,000 monthly, which will be necessary to make the road's aggregate 1924 results sufficient for its charges, Mr. Greer explained. August gross represented a decrease of about $1,000,000 from $14. 916,655 of the corresponding month last year, but topped July gross by about $500,000.

While August earnings have not been completely compiled, it is estimated reduction in operating expenses was effected which offset substantially the loss in revenue and will bring net operating income to an aggregate comparing favorably with $1,641,960 net earned in August last year.

SENTIMENT IN GRAIN MARKET AGAIN BULLISH

Selection of the control of the control of the chicago and other grain markets this week, influenced by the mass of evidence accruing that the European crops are extremely short of bread grains, and also of oats and bayley.

Appallingly bad weather conditions have further lowered the crop promise in western Europe, and it is claimed that 60 per cent of the grain area of Soviet Russia will suffer a partial or complete crop failure, thus eliminating Russia from the export grain ranks, and leaving Europe more than ever dependent on this country.

RELICS OF BIG INDIAN ARMORED REPTILE FOUND

Remains Said to Be Those of Sauropod Dinosaur Some 60 Feet Long

CALCUTTA, Aug. 10 (Special Correspondence)—Just outside Jubbulpur in the Central Provinces there have been recently discovered some palæontological remains of the highest importance, equal in interest to the finding a short time ago of dino-saur's eggs in the Gobi desert. According to the Geological Survey of India, Dr. Matley, who took up this work of exploration in 1917, found a number of bones of a sauropod dinosaur in a good stage of preservation and a considerable portion of the skeleton of a carnivorous (therapod)

Subsequent investigations brought to light a number of hitherto un-known parts of Indian dinosaurs. Some of the bones in themselves were 51/2 feet long, and Dr. Matley estimated that the reptile to which the larger bones belonged was probably not less than 60 feet in length. A few feet away were found the bones of a carnivorous dinosaur. Some 5000 scutae or scales were also found, which led to the conclusion that one or more of the associated reptiles was protected by dermal

No less than 32 boxes of bones and material were, after a preliminary examination, sent to the British Museum for further study, where the inquiries confirmed the theory of an armored dinosaur. Dr. Matley writes that this Indian dinosaur not only possesses special characteristics, but is the only individual of the armored group that has yet been found in Asian deposits. He continues:

Asian deposits. He continues:

The part of Gondwanaland (the ancient continent, now largely sea, but then comprising land between the Deccan and Africa) from which stegosauria have hitherto been obtainable is Tanganyika, though the only species yet described from that area is generically and specifically different from the Indian specimen. The reptile is of the Lameta age.

The Lameta age, which obtains its name from the Lameta Ghat in the Central Provinces, is the age when the limestone beds in the Ghat were deposited by water in the cretaceous age. At this time the two Jubbulpur hills were formed by deposit. It is presumed that the dino bulpur were carried by the strong currents which flowed over this area in ages long, long before the advent of man.

League Building

Gifts From Various Nations Will Form Feature of Its Embellishment

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON, Sept. 1-Following his visit to the International Labor Office of the League of Nations, the Prince of Ethiopia, the Ras Tafari. has sent as a gift to be placed in the new building and in commemoration of his visit, a magnificent rhinoceros horn mounted in silver by workmen of Ethiopia and forming a stand for a silver-framed autographed portrait.

The new building, for which a site was generously given by the Swiss Government, is making satisfactory progress. It is hoped that the roofing will be finished before the end of the year, thus permitting continuous work to be carried on without fear of stoppage on account of rain or snow.

Among the gifts already promised to the office for this building are £4000 from the British Government, the narticular furnishing to which it is to be applied to be determined in consultation with the architect and the building subcommittee. The Canadian Government has offered to provide doors of Canadian wood for the ground floor. Switzerland is giving two stone figures to be placed at the main entrance door, while Den-mark has offered an "objet d'art" from the Royal Porcelain Factory at Cop-

ONTARIO PREPARES FOR ITS PLEBISCITE

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 8 (Special Correspondence)—The first move for the taking of the plebisette on the liq-uor control of Ontario, on Oct. 23, was nade today when the Attorney-General, W. F. The meeting of the Fifth Assembly of the League of Nations at Geneva, with the fact that it is being attended by the prime ministers of Great Britain and The League France, and by many of the leading figures of the of European member na-stands for and of what it has accomplished. The League was founded amidst the passions and prejudices of the period immediately following the armistice. Its birth was attended by extravagant expectations on one side, and by extravagant denunciations on the other. Neither the hopes nor the fears of that era have been realized. Yet the League itself persists.

Nations tions, is good ground for a dispassionate appreciation of what the League

The project of the League of Nations was the biggest and most constructive idea which came out of the war. Reduced to its simplest essentials the League idea rests upon two concepts. The first is that, if peace and harmony are ever to be brought into international relations, the first step is that the representatives of all nations should meet round a common table once a year to consider the problems that confronthumanity and to take counsel together as to how they may be peacefully solved. The second is that the members should undertake, where a dispute becomes acute, to abstain from warlike action for three months in which to permit the Council and other organs of the League to endeavor to find a means of settling the dispute by peaceful means.

It is not open to reasonable doubt that, if the world is to move toward lasting peace, it will have to travel this road. Wars will never disappear if nations continue to live in water-tight compartments and refuse to take that first step toward practical brotherhood, which is to discuss with their neighbors their common affairs, and to provide means whereby reason and goodwill can be brought collectively to bear upon international disputes before recourse is had to the terrible arbitrament of war. As all experience shows, the ordinary channels of diplomacy are not enough, because they put a premium on nations looking at every international question primarily from a narrowly nationalist point of view. What has been missing is the body which can look at things from the point of view of humanity as a whole.

Unfortunately, perhaps, the original Covenant of the League went somewhat beyond these simple ideas. It looked as if it were intended to create a body which had some of the attributes of a superstate. It imposed legal obligations on the members which went further than most nations were willing to undertake. It made inevitable the excessive preoccupation of the League with the internal affairs of Europe. Altogether the document constituting the League offered an exceedingly good target for attack either by those who were opposed to international co-operation or had political reasons for opposition, or by that very much larger number of people who were averse to taking a decision on so momentous a question without plenty of time for study and reflection. The League was rejected by the United States as much, probably, because of objection to the somewhat ambitious terminology of the Covenant, as because of objection to the fundamental ideas underlying the League itself.

Four years' experience has now brought the League of Nations and its true purpose into much better perspective. The League quite obviously has no superstate functions. The obligations under Articles X and XVI were whittled down by the second and third assemblies until een made clear that every nation is the judge of what action, if any, it should take, in every question which comes before the League. On the other hand, the League has established itself as a great clearing house of international action. A large amount of international work is still done by special ad hoc conferences, as Washington or more recently at London. But these have no continuous existence. More and more of the world's important business is being brought within the purview of the League.

It is obvious, indeed, that the League of Nations holds the field as the only permanent instrument for regularly and persistently promoting world understanding and world peace. It has no rival. Moreover, under the guidance of experience, it is abandoning some of its excessive pretensions, and is learning how to act as that constitutional link between nations which must exist if another world war is to be avoided. There can be little doubt that eventually the League will come to embrace all nations. Very likely, before it does so, modifications will be necessary in the original Covenant, in order that it may conform to the lessons of the postwar years. But that the League is making good does not now seem to be open to doubt.

Indicted before the court of public opinion on a charge of neglect of duty, the non-voting citizens of the United States are threatened with summary proceedings which may, if the method outlined meets final approval, deprive them of a privilege they have failed to make use of. The Republican League Club of New York has under consideration the feasibility of action by Congress which would penalize by disfranchisement all qualified voters found guilty of habitual non-voting. The proposal is to invoke such action against those who are shown to have failed, through their own negligence, to appear at the polls on three successive occasions

The

But, quite naturally, there has been raised a doubt as to the possibility of enforcing such a law. The question of its possible unconstitutionality at once presents itself. The non-voter might quite reasonably defend himself by claiming that negligence cannot be imputed when one simply fails to exercise a privilege. Strictly speaking, perhaps, the right to vote is a privilege rather than a duty. Surely it has always been so regarded. The non-voting citizen probably finds it easy to defend his failure to go to the polls by speciously arguing that his ballot would not change the general result. He fails to realize that by his inaction he is aiding those whose policies and candidates he should oppose.

Possibly a simpler and surer way might be found to solve the problem. In most, if not all the states of the American Union, it is the practice to impose a poll or head tax on all male citizens. Suppose laws were passed extending this assessment to all men and women qualified to vote, and that the rate be advanced to say $5 per capita, with the proviso that all persons who exercised the right to vote should automatically be relieved from this tax, and that all non-voters be compelled, under penalty of a fine, to pay. The pocketbook, after all, is the vulnerable point. Some learn patriotism only as their self-interest is affected. The non-voter who is compelled to pay for his negligence in staying away from the polls might find it convenient to learn that his privilege is, in fact,

But there are, as a matter of fact, being employed really constructive processes which promise to bring better results in inducing a fuller expression of the public will. Antericans are learning that it is they who must safeguard and protect their sacred liberties. They are realizing that they can no longer safely sleep. upon their rights. Failing to vote for themselves, they have discovered that the newly naturalized immigrants are voting for them. The result is not always what they might wish. Patriotism perhaps has not been as potent in arousing them as the realization that their individual interests are at stake. The results of recent elections indicate a general awakening to the needs of the hour.

Some progress must be conceded, even to the Balkans. In the past it has been customary, there as elsewhere, for a country to consolidate newly won territory by the erection of fortresses. Now the National Assembly of the young Greek Republic has voted to establish a Greek university at Saloniki, by which it naturally hopes that Greek rule in Macedonia will become more firmly rooted. It is an interesting plan and one that indicates a new attitude toward territorial questions in the Balkans. If Greece can impart some of its older culture and wider commercial experience, not only to the restless Macedonians themselves, but also to the Bulgars and Serbs who cast longing glances across Macedonia to the Ægean Sea, it will have done much to justify its position. Once upon a time the Greeks were able to modify deeply through superior learning even their Roman conquerors.

Though definitely voted only a few weeks ago, the project for a Greek university at Saloniki is not new. It has been thought of ever since the city was recovered from the Turks in 1912. Eleutherios Venizelos planned two new universities as the outposts of the new and greater Hellas, one at Saloniki, and the other at Smyrna. Hitherto the country has had but one, that at Athens. But the dream of a Greek Smyrna came to an abrupt end with the evacuation before the Turks two years ago, and now Saloniki, with Macedonia, remains the chief territory gain of the war period. The abandonment of Smyrna and the old Greek lands in Asia Minor has changed considerably the situation also at Saloniki and in Macedonia, for it is there that the majority of the Greek and Armenian refugees have been sent for protection from the Turks. In the city itself, which normally has about 200,000 inhabitants there are now over 100,000 refugees, and in Macedonia as a whole about 1,250,000. This is a new population in a fluid state in which the Greek Government has an excellent chance to win friends and partisans. It needs education. as well as training for self-support. Being removed from its accustomed surroundings, it has become, to use a phrase attributed to Benito Mussolini, the Italian Dictator, in regard to his own people, "a potter's clay out of which the statesman can, after having kneaded it, make a statue," presumably to his own liking.

Among these refugees at Saloniki there was also reopened last January the Anatolia College, an American institution, incorporated under the statutes of Massachusetts and originally founded in 1886 at Marsovan in Asia Minor. In March, 1921, it was closed by the Turks, who under the old regime had recognized it as legal. Now, in the words of its president, the Rev. George E. White, it is "a pilgrim college among a pilgrim people." Among the refugees fourteen of its former students have been discovered and the first enrollment included about fifty others. There is also an American girls' school with an attendance last spring of 325, and some refugee schools among the homeless thousands who live in camps destitute of books and even pencils and paper. All these schools M. Venizelos himself invited to Saloniki, "to promote the American spirit among the peoples of the Balkan Modern Greek is compulsory.

To build up the new Greek university will, of course, take time. A beginning is to be made with the subjects in which the university at Athens is deficient, applied sciences and commercial studies. The city needs sanitation and the harbor development. Next the study of Balkan languages and Balkan races will be taken up, and in view of the large Jewish nonulation, originally driven there from Spain, M. Venizelos had planned a school for the study of Hebrew. In France anxiety has been expressed lest the French be left out, but in view of the relations between the new Greek Republic and the French Government this is not likely to happen. At the American institutions the subject most eagerly studied is English. Saloniki, where Paul preached, may yet become a city of international understanding.

Nearly two decades ago, as Miss Agnes Repplier, writing in the Atlantic Monthly, reminds a portion of the American public which leást needs such reminder, Henry James "pleaded with the Bryn Mawr students, and, through them, with the Nation at large," for a more considerate use of language in daily speech. The need was, and remains, obvious to those who practice such consideration themselves. But the Nation is still very much at large, and for one person likely to be influenced by the opinion of a Henry James there are many who are much more likely to be influenced by the conversation of the comics.

The cartoonists, one may believe, have no secret ambition to modify the speech of a free people; but from day to day they translate into the black and silent letters of the alphabet the sounds made by many of the free people when they talk to each other, and the effect, it may reasonably be argued, is to popularize a bad usage and encourage more and more of the free people to talk like the comics. The silent speech of the printed page and the spoken speech of the playhouse set examples for readers and hearers (as the French Nation seems long ago to have recognized) that are a constant and inevitable force in creating the composite of national speech.

Mr. James was aesthetically pained by the substitution of "limp, slack, passive tone for clear, clean, tidy tone" when Americans spoke to each other; he was distressed by mispronunciations; but, unless memory errs, he was in comparatively little danger of being disturbed by the mushy telescoping of words that is becoming so noticeable in many American gatherings.

Something of what Miss Repplier now calls the "careless corruption of our tongue" may, in short, be attributable to conditions that have become largely operative during about the same length of time that the comic strip has become practically universal. A people, or that part of a people, individually getting accustomed to being jammed together in rapid transit vehicles might conceivably form a habit of jamming their words together in rapid transit sentences. Hence such combinations as "Whaja got?" 'Whereja goin'?" "Waja say?" "Hadja lunch?" Humpty Dumpty, to be sure, carried the condensation of speech much further, and that was in England and as far back as the 1870's, when Alice climbed through the looking glass.

"They've a temper, some of them-particularly verbs." said he to Alice, explaining his mastery of words: "they're the proudest—adjectives you can do anything with, but not verbs—however, I can manage the whole lot of them! Impenetrability! That's what I say."
"Would you tell me, please," said Alice, "what that

'Now you talk like a reasonable child," said Humpty Dumpty, looking very much pleased, "I meant by 'impenetrability' that we've had enough of that subject, and it would be just as well if you'd mention what you mean to do next, as I suppose you don't mean to stop here all the rest of your life.

But Humpty Dumpty was an imagined character, whereas those in America who talk like the comics in the newspaper are quite real, and apparently increasing in number.

The obstacle that confronts those who continuously labor in the cause of "good speech" -and by so doing at least maintain a standardis, after all, the indifference, even among college graduates, of the general public. Nothing has been projected into the educational system of America, formal or informal, to make the attainment of what Henry James called "security of intention" in speech seem widely worth the trouble of working for it. It is an odd but obvious fact that most Americans "learn to talk" when they are babies and are in general content to let it go at that after they are grown up.

Editorial Notes

A total of well over 3000 placements for men and women through the appointments office of Columbia University during the year just ended is a record worthy of a word of praise. It may interest some, moreover, to learn, on the authority of Nicholas McD. McKnight, secretary of appointments, that the greatest number of calls for men in full-time positions have been for salesmen: Mr. McKnight clears up a somewhat moot question along this line when he explains that, whereas the average man coming out of college is afraid of becoming a salesman, because he believes that a salesman must be glib. thick skinned, a ready conversationalist and pretty much of a handshaker, this is exactly the type that the large manufacturing companies do not want. "They want presentable, intelligent men who will work," Mr. McKnight avers, adding: "The 'fresh guys' are out of date. But it is a very difficult job to persuade the new graduates that they have selling ability. They think that they know, because they spent one summer ringing door bells as book agents.' How strikingly this last statement will recall memories to many a college man!

A remarkable story of medical quackery has been brought to light in connection with the visit of some American tourists to the Church of St. Bartholomew the Great, in Smithfield, England. It hinges around the discovery that the memorial to a certain Francis Anthony was found in a dirty and dilapidated condition by one of his descendants. This Francis Anthony, who was born in 1550, the son of a London goldsmith, was a "chemical physician," and hased his practice upon a medicine which he called "aurum potabile." He maintained, it appears, that metals were excellent medicines, especially gold, which he said he could dissolve, though, be it noted, he failed to make good his assurances when placed on trial before the master of the mint. Several times he was in jail for practicing without a license, on one occasion, after an examination by the censors of the College of Physicians, being found "ignorant of the principles of medicine." However, despite it all, he derived a large fortune from his nostrum and today his memorial is to be restored as though he had been some great man!

Shanghai—and Back of It

The warfare in China, centering upon Shanghai since The warfare in China, centering upon Shanghai since the first shot was fired on Sept. 2, has brought no surprise to those who, for the past three years, have followed developments in that part of the world. To have General Wu Pei-fu and Marshal Chang Tso-lin openly come forward as the active military backers of the embattled tuchuns of Kiangsu and Chekiang was expected from the first. For the contest around "the Paris of the Orient." largely worth while as is the immediate reward. orient, largely worth-while as is the immediate reward, is but the mask of a prize far greater. Back of the question of control of that wealthy port lies the deeper and broader debate over the control of China's self, its opposing sides personified, as it were, by the Manchurian Chang and Wu, commander of the Central armies and the true behind the rather impotent "coolie President,"

The one would have Peking really govern the big, amorphous land—but only providing that he, Chang, govern Peking; the other works for a strongly centralized government, with no qualification springing out of personal ambition. Back in '22, these gentlemen attempted to reach a conclusion, vis et armis, and the war lord from the North, who had advanced against the capital, was driven back handily defeated. But Wu's victory was neither decisive then nor did he endeavor subsequently to drive it home, so that, ever since, it has been foregone that a decision was only deferred. It has been a matter merely of when and where and how the contest should be renewed, and events in the past two or three weeks have brought the answer.

Ranking fifth in total tonnage among the ports of two hemispheres, sitting in receipt of 37 per cent of China's maritime customs, officialdom's chief financial buttress throughout the Flowery Republic—Shanghai stands at throughout the Flowery Republic—Shanghai stands at the southeastern extremity of Kiangsu province, just over the line from Chekiang. The supreme native authority in the city is a military commissioner. Not so long ago, when the now discredited Anfu Party was yet in the yellow saddle, this important and profitable post was held by General Lu Yung-hsiang, who, being advanced to the governorship of Chekiang, was able to have appointed in his stead at Shanghai one Ho Feng-lin, another Anfuite, naturally, and his own loyal lieutenant.

Anfuite, naturally, and his own loyal lieutenant.

This was arranged from Peking and despite the opposition of Kiangsu's tuchun. Chi Hsieh-yuan. Chi and Lu are political opponents, the first a Chihli Party man, the other "the Last of the Angus" still to hold any position of influence. Add to this that Marshal Chang was believed to be supporting Lu, while the President, his Commanderin-Chief, and the Christian General Feng were all known to be back of Chi, and the stage clearly was set for ex-ly such a drama as now is being played out. Today's state of affairs, as it has taken shape so rapidly, is at once serious and satisfying; serious, as war always is and ever must be—and this in spite of the somewhat opera bouffe qualities which fighting between Chinese forces usually assumes—and satisfying because it is more than a little probable that some such drastic purge was needed to bring anything like a permanent betterment in that disordered body politic which we call the Chinese Republic. If the Kiangsu-Peking troops are successful in defeating the Chekiang-Manchu alliance, the Chihli Party, Tsao Kun at its head, will be in control of the greater part of China proper, and this for the first time since the revolution, a dozen years ago.

The only two considerable exceptions to their com-plete victory (Manchuria lies outside this "proper" area) will be a part of the southland, now contested between Sun Yat-sen and Chen Chiung-ming, and the mountainous province of Yunan, where Tang Chi-yao reigns supreme. In other words, the elimination of Lu would mark a long step toward the unification of China by military methods. Were it also to mean a genuine defeat of Chang, the whole national situation would be sweepingly advanced.

There are, of course, two factors in this unsettled equation other than those here discussed: Dr. Sun, and the foreign interests, particularly at Shanghai, where is an extra-territorial settlement with a population of some 35,000: Japanese, Americans, English, French, Italians, Portuguese, Germans. As for the latter, one need write only that they are in small danger, if, indeed, any. The chieftains in this struggle, on whichever side, are entirely aware that their chances of success might be injured fatally by antagonizing the European or American gov-

Further, against the recognized growth of anti-foreign feeling among the people is to be set the prepared presence in the Wusung of above a score of war craft, flying the flags of six powers: the United States and Great Britain, Japan, France, Italy and Portugal. These are now combined under the direction of Admiral Anderson of the British Navy. It is well to add in this connection that Dr. Schurman, just returned to the States from his Peking post, is of opinion that foreign intervention should be resorted to only as a last, inescapable resort: "Surely it would be opposed most vigorously by all the Chinese

As to Dr. Sun and his supporters, one may not be sure. Canton is in a ferment at present, owing to the merchants' strike against the Communistic régime lately introduced there. Utterly disapproving General Wu, and as emphatically opposed to the President and all he stands for, this extreme South and extreme republican element would, in all logic, side with Lu of Chekiang and Marshal Chang. It is an influence by no means to be overlooked, this of Dr. Sun's, especially as somewhere in the Canton background may be Soviet support. Sun has several times shown a readiness to welcome Moscow's several times shown a readiness to welcome Moscow's co-operation, and Mr. Tchitcherin may see this as a fit moment to press the matter.

The Week in New York

Jazz, which is the melting pot of music, is to be exhibited by its most prominent exponent, Paul Whiteman, in the various stages of its evolution, for judgment by a rather friendly jury here Sunday night. The many strains, and possibly its critics would add, stresses, that have gone into the making of the perhaps still unfinished product to which this American creation has attained, will be introduced into original ragtime pieces in the ccurse of the program in the chronological order in which they appeared. The occasion for this novel concert is an entertainment to start a building fund for the New York Newspaper Women's Club. To add to the interest, several persons known, most of them, not so much for any special musical taste as for their leadership in New York's community life, have been invited to deliver a verdict on whether jazz has justified itself sufficiently to survive in the public favor. Except that Mme. Alma Gluck is expected to be on the jury one might, probably without contempt of court, anticipate a favorable verdict. Yet, however much the jury may be "packed," a review of jazz history, showing how the clarinet replaced the fiddle, how the wailing sounds of Negro chanting were introduced, how other wind instruments were added and made to pant and bleat, and finally how the tones were softened and blended into a novel and not displeasing melody, may be an interesting indication of to what extent jazz may be expected to take a place among other great innovations as an expression of the musical genius of a new nation.

♦ ♦ ♦ Lord Northcliffe once said that America began in the middle of the Atlantic: he felt its presence before he was half way here. By the same token one would say that Kansas, at any rate for Senator Charles Curtis of that State, began as he left England, for he contrived to get the peace and quiet of the great open spaces, and the appetizing dinner bell of the farm country all within the environment of his transatlantic voyage. In travel-ing home he drew the line on ships with the jazz bands dinner hugles and dress clothes which have been grafted upon modern life on the ocean wave, and sought out a home-like rest on-a freighter, the American Farmer. With a ship so fortunately named he, with some companions stranded by the rush of returning Americans, enjoyed the simple life. They went to bed figuratively with the chickens, and when the bell rang it reminded the Senator, at least, so much of home that no breath of salt sea air was needed to brace his appetite.

An old home week for clowns is to be a feature next week of Coney Island's annual Mardi Gras. Some fifty of them from many parts of the country will attend, partly to cut their capers in the pageants that go to make up the fête and partly for their sentimental interest in re-newing old acquaintances. All of those who will attend have been in the business of being funny for years, and have established their reputations among theatrical and circus folk; and some of them, such as Marcelline, have attained what used to be rare for a clown, a personal renown with audiences. How little they differ behind their masks from the many who merely see them play has become one of life's best known ironies; and it never have been so well demonstrated, perhaps, as in this week when they come together for an amusement more ancient than their own, that of swapping yarns.

Americans, it seems generally admitted, hit a tennis ball harder than the players of most other nations. With what power the best of them hit can be gauged from the casualties in racquets and balls at the hand of that mas-ter of the game, W. T. Tilden 2d, who has been playing recently what in the opinion of some critics is the or anyone else has ever played. At his last match at Forest Hills with William H. Johnston, he used match at Forest Hills with william H. Johnston, he used five racquets in playing three sets. Twenty-one balls were used, not because any of them went far out of bounds but because when Tilden hit one, in the tennis phrase, "It stayed hit." The net, made of stout hemp strung on steel ropes, was the only thing that seemed to be made of sturdy enough material. Amateur sport here, it seems, taxes to the limit the very implements with which it is played.

The air mail from New York to San Francisco is apidly making itself an integral part of the business mechanism of the United States. A stable patronage mechanism of the officer dates. A state of the among banks and brokerage houses as well as among other business firms, is growing up, so that postal officials are beginning to see where an increase of facilities will be of most service. Eleven air mail boxes, with their distinctive red, white and blue stripes, were originally placed at various points in reach of the largest number That at Broadway and Wall Street, heart of the banking and brokerage district, it is found, has received the heaviest patronage. Of the ten new boxes just requested by the postmaster of New York City to be placed about the city so as to be still more convenient to the public, therefore, four will be located in or near the financial district, and one will be placed directly in front of the Stock Exchange.

Golf has got into politics; or, rather, has taken som of the politics out of politicians. The National Demo Club and the National Republican Club here left the first of what are to be annual matches on the playing grounds at Pelham. No significance has yet been de-teected in the fact that the Democrats beat the Republicans by a score of 65 to 23. The only significance, in fact, that was detected in the whole event was that pointed out at a dinner afterward where speakers of both parties congratulated all those present for being such friendly

Modern machinery seemed for a long time as though it would leave men to be little more than bridges to cover some mechanical gap. That it has been carried beyond this, however, to the point where the machine becomes not a superman but a highly efficient tool, was vividly illustrated in the heart of New York this week by a steam shovel trundling up Madison Avenue, single-handedly, boldly, dexterously clearing off the old pavement. Responding to the lightest touch of the engineer who controlled her,—one could not say "it"—she strongly or gently, quickly or slowly, pushed and pulled, spread and tore, dug and piled, with an endless variety of motions suited, it would seem, to every necessary act, and all with the willing determination of a faithful, well-trained animal. Three hand levers and a pedal, with a chain to release the bottom of the scoop sent her through them release the bottom of the scoop, sent her through them all. With her body resting in the middle of the street, the scoop would reach out to the side to uproot the pavement along the curb, pushing forward and outward with a nice exactness so as to scrape away all of the paving and none of the sidewalk. She heaped the chunks into a pile or loaded them rapidly into a truck. When she had cleared away a new space in front a chain was attached to the shovel. This she would hook without help to a wire handle on one of the extra sections of her platform behind her, swing it around front, joggle it into alignment, and then with a quick tap, fit it into place. Then she would roll herself onto the new section and start work again. She was a master tool, fitted to the hand of a master workman.

Letters to the Editor

"Efficiency and Low Wage Scale"

To the Editor of The Christian Science Monitor: I am pleased at the attitude you take in your editorial Aug. 29, headed "Efficiency and Low Wage Scale." May I cite to you my own personal experience? For many years I served as a post office clerk, and in March, was made acting postmaster at a little in California. The salary then offered was $1400. due time I was made postmaster, and the salary gradually reached $1600 with a three-cent commission on each money-order written.

ceipts of the office, which is a third class office, gradually decreased. As the salary of the postmasters of third class offices is governed by the receipts of their offices. received notice in June of this year that, beginning July 1, the salary would be $1300. The living conditions in the oil fields are very much the same from year to year, and there has not been a decrease in any living expense since the war prices of

What is true of this place is true of many other places and a problem similar to mine, in being forced to face the question of how to pay my just debts, keeping my credit good, etc., is having to be solved by many other

In obligating oneself to be a postmaster unforeseen circumstances often add to the already named difficulties. In my own case, for instance, a fire, which wiped out, ir July, 1923, six business houses, including the post office destroyed many of my personal effects, such as my safe, electric fan, desk, tables, typewriter, adding machine, This, of course, meant that I had to replace these together with the fixtures for the post office and at once. Consequently what I obtained had to be bought on nonthly payments. It is useless to go into details coninconvenience to the public, as well as myself, which resulted.

I believe that, if the people knew the difficulties that come to Government employees and also that the salaries are not adequate, the great majority would pay three cents to mail a letter in order to increase the salaries. and not do it grudgingly either. I also believe that, if the salaries were raised, much fault-finding, condemnation, etc., directed toward the Government would be eliminated.

Why Not a Peace College?
